BERMUDA.

We have just been assured with a perusal of a note, which it appears has been going round the butchers in Sydney, convening a meeting of the members of that trade, for the purpose, it would seem, of fixing the price that shall obtain in future give for fat cattle. For the information of all concerned, we submit a copy of it.

"It having been arranged by several carcass and wholesale butchers, to call a meeting for the purpose of entering into arrangements for the future purchase of fat cattle, you are particularly requested to attend at seven o'clock of the same, on Friday afternoon, the 18th June, to be held at the Edinburgh Castle, at three o'clock."

We do not profess to be sufficiently acquainted with these matters to say whether this proceeding is legal. As regards the owners of cattle (if the butchers do adopt the plan proposed in the above note) it appears to us very grossly unjust upon them, and unjustifiable. They have years of toll and hardship to undergo, without tasting for a moment any of the comforts of social life, before they can bring their stock to market, and when they do so they get nothing but a fair price, they find that all their exertions and anxiety of mind is defeated by this specious plan.

June 19.—Information has just reached us of a murdered committed yesterday evening by a employment James Walsh, a servant in the employ of Mr. John Cullen, of the "Inn-Sutton Forest." An inquiry into the cause of death has been held by our esteemed Police Magistrate, Samuel North, Esq., and the man Walsh has been committed to take his trial before the coroner for the unfortunate victim, James Ford.

It appears that Ford had come to the Old-bury Mill to get some wheat ground, and on this way home stopped at the Shamrock Inn, where he was met by two men, who were the prisoner Walsh, who was at the time in the house, the landlord having gone to Sydney. In the course of conversation, Walsh challenged the deceased to wrestle, backing himself for £10; the deceased claimed six shillings on the countess and desired Walsh to cover it. Walsh refused to do so; deceased then asked Walsh why he proposed the thing if he did not intend abiding by it; hereupon, high words ensued, and Walsh struck Walsh a blow on the face. Walsh became enraged, and said he would not allow any man to strike him; deceased struck him a second time, remarking "you don't seem to like it." Walsh again struck him, and the barrell gun which stood behind the bar, fell from the hands of the present, despairing them instantly to leave the house; all retired from the room but deceased, who seemed to brave Walsh. Walsh then snatched one barrel at deceased, but the latter escaped, and immediately advanced towards Walsh (as some of the witnesses state), when Walsh fired the second barrel, the contents entered the body, a mortal wound being passed through; deceased lingered till three o'clock this morning, when he died. Both the prisoner and deceased were incarcerated. Both of the men had been teetotallers for the past two years, and deceased's mother had expired very day of his death; both men were sober, until this morning, when the prisoner was stated, was very irritable when affected by liquor. It would, indeed, be well for all men of ungovernable passions to abstain from drinking, as the unhappy end of the deceased Ford underwent by training for the use of this kind of conduct—to obtain the right arrangement of their faculties, and thereby subdue those evil propensities which may give way to them affected by intoxicating drinks.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE PUBLIC ROADS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—May I ask through the medium of your wide spreading journal, if the public have any remedy against Her Majesty's Government, for not fulfilling their contract with the proprietors of the roads, by not putting the roads in repair, whilst receiving from the Sydney toll-gate alone upwards of £2000 per annum. If the public have no remedy against the Government, who are receiving the tolls, while the roads are in such a state, a case is aggravated because the Government have a power that no one dare resist. As, for instance, who dare ride through the Sydney Roads, or go to the Sydney Gaol, or to the Court, that would not be done immediately, prosecuted for the offence. And shall it be said, that in a free country like this, that Government are taking from the public a heavy toll, and yet not repairing the roads? Is it not from Sydney, from whence the above sum is received, as above stated, is now impassable, except at great risk of life or limb. And if any plan can be pointed out, there are persons ready to execute it, and will receive payment; at this moment, from the impassable state of the roads, the city of Sydney is locked up; so much so—that four and bread have rose so suddenly to its present rate, and that corn, and other provisions, cannot be brought and corn to market; and thereby many a poor settler's family at this moment deprived of the comforts of life; and last, but not the least of sufferers, through the shameful state of the roads, which the public contractors and proprietors. These persons are compelled to fulfil their contracts, and convey the mails to their destination: some of them are losing £200 a week by bad roads, and the poor labourer, how can he be helped, under these circumstances?

I am aware, to lull the people asleep, it has been insinuated that the Surveyor-General has instructions to repair the roads. He may, but it is to be hoped, that he will not set out to borrow to repair them, he will not do it in the old way, but macadamize them so that the public may have value for their money. Whatever sum of money may have been expended in the repairs of the roads, during the last year, or last three years, there has not been one quarter of a mile of good road made. Under these circumstances, I hope, Gentlemen, you will let this humble appeal be made public in your paper, so that something may be doing to the roads.

Yours, respectfully,
A RATE-PAYER.

GUM TRADE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—A late article in your paper, upon the gum arabic of commerce, has attracted much importance than most of your readers are probably aware. A few years ago I crossed Liverpool Plains, where I saw, at a stockman's hut, a considerable quantity of a very transparent resinous substance, which I considered highly valuable. Upon asking where it was obtained, I ascertained that it was from the Mylly tree, a species of acacia, universally predominating in the interior. Upon asking if any quantity could be procured, I was told that it could be procured about twenty pounds of it, and found it to contain, as far as I could judge, all the essentials of gum arabic, and which the description given by your correspondent fully agrees with the gum arabic, except that instead of hen eggs, varying of course larger and smaller,—from pure white to a slightly yellow colour, perfectly soluble in water, and when so dissolved imparted to furniture a varnish more brilliant than any other, except that of the quantity I procured was used in that way. From the description given by your correspondent, I have not the slightest doubt, if not the gum arabic of commerce, is one quality, and that the gum arabic of commerce is another fact which is startling viz., that England pays one million and a half sterling for gum arabic. Here there is a mine of wealth heretofore unexplored; the whole world is waiting, and waiting, for the discovery sounding in this matter, need all the best cattle stations are on myral runs.

A residence of four years beyond the boundaries convinces me that a vast quantity might be collected at many stations, and that the gum arabic business, extended over the whole view of the case strikes me as important, viz., the amelioration of the condition of the aborigines; once let the gum trade become important, and instead of the blacks being an annoyance, they would be considered an acquisition; and if a fair and equitable system of barter was established, would in the course of time become a useful race: the produce of the bush is their natural commerce, and let them continue to trade, export of 69,457,897 lbs. for the year. The comparison with the last four years will stand us as :—

[illegible]

1843 ..	49,324,924	"
1844 ..	69,457,897	ditto to December 5, and the remaining month estimated.

Showing an increase of nearly millions of pounds on the supply of 1843. The whole imports of the year into the leading ports are as follows :—

	1844		1843

It will be observed that there is an increase in quantity of all kinds, except South America, which there is a falling off of nearly one-third from 1843. This is accounted for mainly by the large portion of South American wool of the year 1843 being of inferior quality, being less than 8,524,000 lbs. against 3,763,000 lbs. in 1843, from Buenos Ayres alone, and hence the whole exports of 1844 exceeded those of 1843 by 6,438,896 lbs.—(Hughes' and Co.'s report). The only country which should not must strike every one on surveying this enormous increase is, that it is beyond the range of possibility that a sudden increase of production can have taken place to account for the increase of 1844. Only one country, from which the imports have increased only at the rate of a regular gradual increase of production, are our own colonies in Australia, India, and Cape. In these instances it will be observed that the increase in 1844 is smaller, and such as may fairly be accounted for by the gradual increase of production; and, knowing, we do, that all our colonial wools only it might be shipped to this market only, it is not surprising to find the above stated on the face of this table, that the enormous increased imports from the continents of Europe and Africa have arisen either from the increased stocks of the late cheap years, or from an enormous increase in the quantity of this country, induced by the repeal of the duty, and by the rise in price which took place before the duty was taken off; or, perhaps, partly from all these causes. This is an important consideration, referring to the probable future supply of foreign wool. By the above table it will appear that the continent of Europe and the coast of Africa have imported no less than 125,294 bags in 1844 against 107,799 in 1843. The absolute quantity in 1842; and one great question in inference to the supply of next year is whether it is probable that so great an increase as this in one year from those countries will continue. On the other hand, whether must depend the future price of wool, and it is therefore our duty to furnish all the means in our power to enable our readers to form a correct opinion.

The following are the quantities of foreign wools which have been imported in the last seven years :—

		1,074,474		1,074,474		1,074,474		1,074,474		1,074,474

In looking at the progress of these imports for at period, it will be seen that a similar sudden increase took place from 1835 to 1836, as occurred from 1843 to 1844; and it cannot be a coincidence, occurring under the same circumstances and from what quarters, the sudden increase of more than 22,000,000 lbs. occurred that former occasion. Following the same classification of countries already given, the imports were as follows :—

	1835		1836
	From	lbs.	From	lbs.
Australia, all kinds		4,210,801		4,996,645
East India Good Hope		194,308		339,608

Land		1,245,082		3,717,309
		42,174,532		64,239,977

The increase visible in these two years, it will be observed, was in the same kinds of wool as has been observable last year; the increase being in quantity, under the same circumstances, and other European wools—the produce of our colonies showing, as was the case last year, only a moderate increase, except India, which just at that moment came in.

It will be observed in the table given above that the whole quantity imported again fell in 1837 of 48,379,708 lbs., being a reduction from 137 of nearly 16,000,000 lbs. and again we find the whole of this reduction accounted for by a reduction of the quantity received from the continent of Europe: the classification of the year's imports was as follows :—

	1835		1837
	From	lbs.	From	lbs.
Australia		7,066,525

higher price of wool, with a lower price of wheat during the autumn, appears to have induced the farmers to bring their wool of last year to market more quickly and to a greater extent than in any former year; so that, at the present time, it is ascertained that the farmers have wool on hand than for many years past; and, from the inquiries which we have made, we have reason to believe that the quantity of wools in the hands of staplers in Bernersday as seldom been smaller.

On the other hand, it is understood that the stocks in dealers, and manufacturers' hands in the country are still very considerable.

So far for the supply of the past and the present. As to the trading, and to the exact amount of existing stocks, it is impossible, with the care we have used, to exhibit any estimate on grounds sufficiently satisfactory to be absolutely relied upon, on account of their being scattered so much in dealers' and exporters' hands out of the ports. After some considerable care, we are, however, of opinion that, taking all things into account, the stocks in hand do not differ much from what they were at the beginning of 1844. Of home-grown wools we believe the quantity to be considerably less, but of foreign wools more; but we believe, taking the position of all parties into account, from the grower to the manufacturer, that the quantity of trading wools is not larger than a year ago. We are, therefore, of opinion that we commence the year with a similar stock, and with a prospect of a smaller supply as well from the farmer at home as from the foreign grower.

Then as to the consumption. There is no doubt that the consumption of wool during 1844 has exceeded that of any former year, and that the amount of business transacted, during the beginning of 1844, has been so much greater than in any former year, as to have been greater than at any former period.

In the first eleven months, from January 5 December 5, the exports of woollen goods and yarns exceeded in value those of 1843, for the same period, by no less than £1,667,143, viz., £7,585,770 in 1844, against £5,918,627 in 1843.

The chief part of this increase has taken place to the United States, and to the Eastern States.

Messrs. Gibson, Ord, and Co., of Manchester, in their last circular, give the following statement of the shipments of woollen goods to those markets, by which the increase in the quantity of the trade is clearly shown. The following extracts from the tables in this circular, in the absence of any official accounts of the distribution of our exports later than the end of 1843, will tend to show in what proportion the increase has been to those countries:—

Exports to China, from London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, for five years.	Worsted	Woollens
1840	1,440,000	6,820,000
1841	1,440,000	6,820,000
1842	1,440,000	6,820,000
1843	1,440,000	6,820,000
1844	1,440,000	6,820,000

Exports to Calcutta, from London, Liverpool, and the Clyde, for five years.

Worsted	Woollens
1840	1,440,000
1841	1,440,000
1842	1,440,000
1843	1,440,000
1844	1,440,000

Exports to Bombay, from London, Liverpool, and the Clyde, for five years.

Worsted	Woollens
1840	1,440,000
1841	1,440,000
1842	1,440,000
1843	1,440,000
1844	1,440,000

During the two last months of the year, we appears, from the Official Accounts, to be a considerable check to the export trade; and the American market has been presented as glutted for some months past, and certain it is that the imports of all kinds of goods had diminished at a very rapid rate during the latter months of the year; the late consignment also represent the demand for goods of the Southern States as having diminished very much, owing to the low price of cotton. Indeed, moreover, there is no doubt a considerable check to the export trade, and the goods which have lately been much pressed in the United States.

It is impossible, on the whole, to form any estimate of our export trade for the future;—but of the last year's trade we have usually to regret, but not to regret, that the trade to the States should diminish, we have much confidence that it will expand in other places in at least an equal proportion. And we would not regret the trade of 1845 being so much less than 1844, unless some check should be given to a rise of prices. But with regard to the home trade, we think we may fairly expect a very considerable extension even on the demand of the year, and especially if the prices continue to moderate. There can be no doubt of the increased amount of employment, which the recent contemplated railways, and public works of various kinds, will furnish the whole country with full work, and probably at higher wages, and the general activity of the business consequent on all this will not fail to create a large demand for woollens of all kinds adapted for the labouring classes.

It is by no means an unimportant consideration, that the future value of wool, as at cotton, in combination with which so much wool is used, continues at a very low price, with every probability of a very large supply; and also that indigo, drugs, and oils, used in the manufacture of woollens, continue at an oppressive low price.

On the whole, then, we are of opinion, that, as far as all things more perfectly combined, we promise a large and steady business in this important branch of trade, for while the supply of wool is quite ample at this time for the use of the country, and the demand, if the prices are not too high, will be steady, and the demand, if the prices are not too high, will be steady, and the demand, if the prices are not too high, will be steady.
